Day of the Armed Forces

The Day of the Armed Forces is a meeting day between Spaniards, civilians and military, with the aim of accentuating the knowledge that society has of its Armed Forces. On this day, the work of the military who are far from their homeland is also recognized, in operations abroad, of those who are integrated into permanent surveillance, security and presence operations in areas of interest, highlighting values such as the spirit of service, discipline or a sense of duty.

"The military demonstrate Spain's commitment to international peace and security, participating with our allies in deterrence and security efforts, and projecting stability in those countries that are in conflict or that exceed their capacities to achieve the necessary security. so that their societies can develop their full potential with full freedom and normality," said the Spanish Royal House this Saturday.

The Day of the Armed Forces was established in 1978 when it was decided to hold an institutional act that would serve as a tribute to the Armies and the Navy, and to promote knowledge and their integration into society. It is always celebrated on the weekend closest to May 30, the day of San Fernando, patron saint of the Armies. This year, however, as that weekend coincided with the local and regional elections held in Spain on May 28, Armed Forces Day was delayed until June 3.
